

Venice Biennale

Muf Architecture's British Pavilion at the Venice Biennale takes a strand of British architectural practice rooted in research and collaboration to the world stage. Here we preview the collaborations with artists, scientists and schools that created the 'Villa Frankenstein'

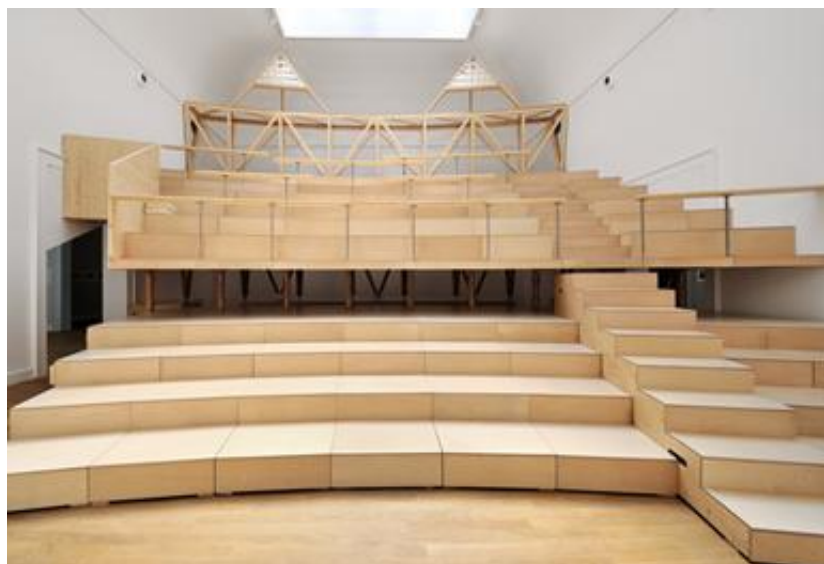

Latest news from Venice

Venice 2010: the Irish Pavilion's consumable archive

27-Aug-2010 | By Richard Waite

This year's Irish Pavilion at the Venice Biennale is being billed as 'both an archive and reading room' of Dublin architects de Blacam and Meagher

Venice 2010: Inside the British Pavilion with Ed Vaizey

27-Aug-2010 | By Merlin Fulcher

AJ Critics editor James Pallister reports on the opening of Muf Architecture's British Pavilion at the Venice Architecture Biennale

Venice 2010: surreal adventures in